TO THE SHAMROCK IV.

The American people, though disappointed that the American yacht was so unfortunate as to be forced out of the American's cup race-off Sandy Hook yesterday, will be prompt to congratulate Sir Thomas Lipton, the noted English yachtsman, on the splendid victory of his Shamrock IV. It is with unalloyed pleasure that we witness the renewal of the age-long rivalry for the America's cup. It affords a series of truly entrancing spectacles. Steam-powered gasoline-hull yachts in these days so largely supplanted sails that is a rare sight to see two great boats borne over the waves under clouds of canvas, so fast that the hulls seem mere appendages to them; more ballast, or drag, to keep them from flying to join the cloud fleets of the sky. Only a comparatively few, it is true, are able to witness such a contest in the best advantage, but for them it is the vision of a lifetime. But our enterprising movie friends have this year contrived to film the historic event so that all may know more about it.

There is a particularly reason for rejoicing in the present race. The contest is an earnest one which typifies the greater contest between the two nations for supremacy on the seas. Since last a Shamrock was outslipped on Yankee waters many things have happened, among them a gigantic growth of the American merchant marine. We have not back to the conditions which prevailed when the first "America" won the cup in a race in which "there was no second." The American merchant marine on the high seas is not indeed the equal of the British, but it is nearer to it than ever before and nearer to it than any other, near enough to make an interesting rivalry.

When Messrs. Adams and Lipton contended off Sandy Hook yesterday there was the best of good fellowship, and on both sides the sincere desire that the better boat might win. An unfortunate accident, the breaking of the ropes which hold the great sails, left the question of which boat is the better undecided for the present. Whatever boat is beaten when the race series ends will enjoy the distinction of being the second best boat in the world—satisfaction enough for anybody, except Adams or Lipton.

VOTED NOT AS IT DRANK.

R. McCallister, editor of the Sacramento Bee, says of the "wet" papers in California, evoking the prohibition fight in the democratic national convention in the following pertinent way:

"That convention was a wet as wet could be, not only in belief, but in personal practice. If it had voted the way it drank it would have carried the wet plank by a three-fourths majority. But it didn't have the guts to vote either way."

Which is to the point. The Democrats perched themselves on the prohibition fence just as they did with all other vital issues. Show us the delegates with the possible exception of Mr. Bryan and his clique, who didn't have his bottle with him in San Francisco. To a democratic delegate it wouldn't be a democratic convention if it wasn't wet, and it was wet, in practice, but when it came to framing a platform policy, was placed ahead of principle.

ON ITS WAY.

After a week of turbulent convention sessions the threatened third party in American politics has been launched. Two comparatively unknown men have been chosen as its standard bearers. They are unknown now, these men, during the campaign they may get their names in the papers once in a while, but when the campaign is over they will pass back into the political oblivion from which they came.

The third party convention has proved one thing. That is that the delegates who assembled there because they couldn't agree with either Republican or Democratic policies found, after they had been pinned up together for a few hours, that their opinions not only were at variance with the two dominant parties in America, but that they couldn't agree among themselves. The convention resembled, more than anything else, a Bolshevik parliament.

WHEAT ON THE DECLINE.

Restrictions on future delivery business in wheat which have been in existence as a war measure since August 25, 1917, expired yesterday. The big going in the Chicago Board of Trade closed at 9:00 a. m. and was answered by an ear-splitting yell from hundreds of brokers, and the war measure instantly ceased to operate. Under rigid government control the dealings in wheat have been confined solely to immediate delivery transactions on a virtual spot cash basis. The result of the lifting of the war restriction—prices were quoted at 2.72 to 2.75, from five to eight cents below the estimates made by traders before the exchange opened.

"Cox's army began a drive on Washington."—Washington Post.

Once before Cox's army marched up the Hill and then marched down again.

The blow might have killed father if anyone of the seven Cabinet representatives of the Administration at San Francisco had been chosen even for the tail of the ticket.

William Tecumseh Sherman's march through Georgia wasn't a circumstance to what the Democratic Committee on Credentials did in the State's delegation at San Francisco.

The Louisville Courier Journal says the Republicans have not learned anything since 1911. It forgets that the school teacher in the White House has been "teaching" the whole world.

"Homes," says the Princeton nominee who hopes to succeed Woodrow Wilson in the White House, "are my hobby." Strange that Mr. Cox does not see that Mr. Wilson is about to lose his home from riding one.

Speaking of the democratic platform the Albuquerque Journal discusses it in detail and winds up with the assertion: "We start from here; where we will wind up in November is a matter of conjecture."

HUSBAND 'DEAD' REPORTS ALIVE

Reported Killed in War Fourteen Years Ago—"Widow" Weds Again—Has 2 Now.

(Correspondence of Associated Press)
 TOKYO, June 18. A letter has been received from a man reported killed in the Russo-Japanese war in North Manchuria by his supposed widow, who has been married to a second husband for nearly ten years.

A sergeant named Jinkichi Onishi has been missing since the battle of Liangyang. The authorities as well as the family of the soldier concluded that he had been killed in the field and funeral ceremonies were observed. His "widow" subsequently married again, two children being born by the second husband. Now nearly 17 years since the death of his first husband was reported, he writes reporting himself safe in a hospital in Petrograd.

According to his letter, at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, he was taken prisoner and has ever since been imprisoned in a dungeon, which he was never allowed to leave until, after 17 years confinement, he fell ill and was removed to a hospital in Petrograd.

TRANSPORT JEWELRY BY AEROPLANE LINE

(Correspondence of Associated Press)
 GENEVA, Switzerland, June 30.

Watches and jewelry are to be transported to Paris by a newly established aerial service and from Paris to London by the present commercial air line, to avoid the troublesome delays of the present rail service. A syndicate of the principal manufacturers has been formed at Chaux de Fonds, the seat of the industry to handle the air shipments. It is expected ten days will be saved by this method and the cost will be slight, in proportion to the value of the freight.

All shipments were decided upon largely because of American buyers insistence upon prompt delivery.
